

PROTECTED AREAS OF TANZANIA

NATIONAL PARKS are the highest level of resource protection that can be provided. Governed by the Tanzania National Parks (TANAPA), there are 16 National Parks in Tanzania, with over 46,348 square kilometers protected.

Managed by the Department of Wildlife, GAME RESERVES are tracts of land set aside for conservation purposes that are generally developed for tourism and hunting. There are 17 Game Reserves in Tanzania.

NGORONGORO CONSERVATION AREA is one of the most unique protected areas in Africa. Managed by the Ngorongoro Conservation Area Authority, it has a high level of protection while also allowing pastoral activity for the Maasai, who are indigenous to the area.

With 17 in Tanzania, WILDLIFE MANAGEMENT AREAS are community established and administered areas which direct any and all economic benefits back into the community. The WMA's allow local communities to protect wildlife more effectively, while also profiting from potential tourism.

GAME CONTROLLED AREAS are areas of land that protect the local game by restricting hunting. Other activities such as residence, agriculture, and the grazing of livestock, are unrestricted. GCA's are managed by the Wildlife division.

With more than 10 in number, MARINE RESERVES are managed by the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Fisheries, and are areas strictly set aside to protect biodiversity.
